

1. I support jailbreaking of tablets and smartphones. It gives you a wider variety of useful apps that may not be deemed acceptable by the manufacturer. I own the phone do I not? Shouldn't in the US I be allowed to do with it as I please as long as I am not breaking a law?
2. I am a technology aficionado. Self taught techo fixit guy.
3. Being that the Android platform is opensource and does not restrict its users from installing what they like it is the iPhone/iOS platform I am speaking about.
4. If i cannot jailbreak the iPhone I would not be able to manage my business the way I do today with the efficiencies that I have due to the jailbreak capability and additional apps offered.
