

Jailbreaking any type of device is a perfect way to use that certain to is's full extent. It allows you to free your device from the producers restrictions and use it the way you want, and customize it to your liking. I have a iPod Touch 4th Generation and I love the way it is now that i have I jailbroken. I have completely changed the whole interface of my iPod to my liking. I use certian themes to change the way my homescreen and lockscreen look. I use tweaks which help change certain settings in the device's system. Personally, I love the whole jailbreaking process and I would love to see the jailbreaking process on other devices as well. Even though its mostly used on Apple devices, it should be used on microsoft devices such as pc, laptops, and even gaming consoles. It would be amazing if I could jailbreak my Xbox 360. I would'nt want it to have the ability to play pirated games, but it should be able to customize the interface of your xbox dashboard and tweak it up the way I want to. Dont get me wrong, the way the Xbox 360 is now is okay, but I would love to see it being able to be jailbroken. Jailbreaking shouldn't be illegal. What is basically does, is it just allows you to free your device and use it the way you want to without restrictions or any laws that stand against it. Jailbreaking should always be legal and never questioned otherwise!
