

Eric Lee Elliott 7 Feb 12

My wife & I use 3 class 3 devices, 3 smart phones, Android - Linux operating systems. These 3 phones provide our main Internet connection for wife's counseling services, my contract work seeking and our connections to friends, businesses & family. With stock firmware, these phones are not reliable & discharge battery in half a day. Being allowed to delete & replace original firmware, allows us reliable smart phones with 24 hour battery life. Sprint & Samsung do honor warranty for hardware failure after phone firmware is replaced or altered. Your illegal restriction on us changing firmware in phones we own, is only threat to our having reliable smart phones.

No where in US Constitution do I find any authority to restrict me using equipment I own on my property.

Class 4 seems to cover computers that Microsoft intends to restrict to using only Microsoft operating systems. When Microsoft forces makers to incorporate BIOS that will only load Microsoft OSs, you will have many more people against all copyrights. We only use Linux - GNU, so we will not take kindly to having only useless computers available to buy.