

“Jailbreaking” a device should never be against the law. I use this process on my iphone and ipad to give me access to things that are not “stock” applications and processes included on my device, like quick-reply text messaging and other minor changes that handle how I receive and send messages and data. I am a hairstylist, and these enhancements greatly improve the way that I do business and communicate with my clients and friends. I feel that something that is my property, that I use constantly throughout my entire day, should be customizable to fit my needs, and jailbreaking allows me to accomplish that perfectly. I feel that it is the right of anyone that owns something, to customize it as they see fit. Please continue to allow us to do that.

Thank you
