My name is Kristina, and I support the jailbreaking of smartphone/tablets and other devices.

I am not a developer of these devices, but I am involved in the development centers of other areas in technology. The devices I really heavily upon for both work, research, financial, and personal, is an iPhone (Verizon contract for 10 years)and an iPad. For personal use, and a means of communication set up by myself in an effort to pull a defunctional back together are: iPhones, Apple TV's, and of course; iPads.

Myself, family, and friends are heavy supporters of Apple, but unfortunately, the options (or lack thereof) available in the Apple App store- is extremely limited. The iPhone is an amazing device, but sadly the apps that are installed, such as Calendar, Messaging, and Mail, are so dated and sparse- they can't begin to keep up with the technology most people face today. There isn't even a document program installed on the iPhone, and if you need to snyc (or would even like to) calendar, mail, scheduling, events- forget it- unless of course you want to put everything into iCloud, which is incredible- but most people do not understand, nor do they feel comfortable having that choice made for them.

Should jailbreaking certain devices become banned, I will go with the devices that can serve my purpose. This isn't anything personal, it's a matter of logic.

Sincerely,

Kristina Erickson
