

I would like to see the exemption of the Digital Copyright Act extended. I do like having the ability to change the software of my smart phones and tablets. It inspires hobbyist programmers to produce new and exciting applications. These programmers will often release updates to older phones that carriers feel that they no longer need to support. I know four people with the same phone as I have. They all have problems. When they see mine (custom rom) they are in awe of how much the device has improved. When it comes down to it . These are just small computers. I am able to choose whatever software/operating system running on my home computer. Why should this be any different? Please extend the exemption of the Digital Copyright Act.
