

We should be allowed to jailbreak our iPhones and game consoles. It is my own right to do whatever I please with a device after I have purchased it. I think it absolutely wrong and illegal to give companies the right to decide what we can or cannot do with what we have fully purchased and own. The fact that we have to defend this position sounds absurd to me but I cannot stand to let big companies get away with something as evil as dictating what the end user gets to do with their personal belongings.
