These comments represent my personal views on the DMCA and are not necessarily indicative of any other entity's views that I may be a member of.

I strongly oppose the DMCA and support the efforts of the Electronic Freedom Foundation, the Association for Computing Machinery, and other like-minded organizations who seek continued protection of fair use, reverse engineering for interoperability purposes, and other rights that would be restricted or otherwise deprived by the DMCA.

Efforts by entrenched industry interests to restrict the freedoms of others and protect their monetary interests at the expense of consumers and all others are strongly antithetical to continued progress in this greatly dynamic new digital realm. Vital research that is needed to further advancement and development in this electronic and informational age would be irrevocably harmed and needlessly restricted by the position that those who would seek to arbitrarily control content and bar fair use.

Thank you,
