Class of works: I am writing in support of Class #3 (Unskippable DVD Advertising): Audiovisual works released on DVD that contain access control measures that interfere with the ability to control private performance, including the ability to skip promotional materials.

Summary:

Disc name: Jurassic Park II

It's easy enough on a VCR to fast-forward over the FBI warnings, but being held captive to reading about Federal Law prohibiting me from illegally copying material that I've actually purchased is crazy. At least with a VCR, the consumer has the option to view or not view those warnings, but I've decided to pay money for a good (read expensive) TV, DVD player, and the DVD itself, and now I am forced each time I watch many of the DVD's in my collection to see a warning meant for people other than me. Worse than this are commercials and "previews" aimed at the mass market (i.e. not me!) which I am also forced to watch. I think copy protection is illegal under the Fair Use Act, but this is just plain stupid and simply encourages me to find alternate, cheaper, and less invasive methods of watching my favorite movies where the warnings, previews, and opening screens are optional or removed completely.
