

RE: Class of works 5

Summary: Petition to renew the exemption for jailbreaking smartphones.

To Whom It May Concern,

I am an iPhone and iPad user. I have had nearly every version of both devices and have enjoyed the products that Apple produces. However, there are occasional gaps in what I want the device to do, which are filled in by the jailbreaking community. These tweaks and additional apps make my phone easier to use, more powerful, and extend the functions of the device for a much better experience.

This device that I've purchased should be free to be used how I see fit without being considered criminal. If I want to respond to a text message from my lockscreen, it should be legal. If I want to be able to turn services such as WiFi and Bluetooth on and off without digging through the settings, I should be able to do that legally. I own this device, so it should be legal for me to use it and customize it to my liking.

I strongly urge you to renew the exemption that jailbreaking does not violate the DMCA and expand it to cover tablets.

Thank you for your consideration,

Casey S.
