I support all forms of jailbreaking, smartphones/tablets, video game consoles, etc.

I am employed in Information Technology as a Process Computing Engineering Supervisor at a Nuclear Generating Plant. I live for technology and believe that once I spend my money on a device, I own it and am free to do with it as I chose.

I currently own an iPhone 4S, iPad 2, and a 17" Macbook Pro. My wife has an iPhone 4S and an iPad 2. And, my stepdaughters each have an iPhone 4S, iPod Touches, and Macbook Airs. However, I am the only one in the family comfortable with utilizing a jailbroke device.

I want the ability to chose how I live my life; I am a Republican and believe in limited government; government is required and need but should not be used to limit free markets and individual rights. Limitations I face if not able to jailbreak include the inability utilize applications and features providers decide to not allow.

I agree with the stance Apple has taken and believe it works well for normal users. However, jailbreakers understand and assume the risks and are savvy enough to recover; we also realize any issues experienced during the process are on us and in no way, reflects the reliability of Apple products; we appreciate Apple and the reliability they have achieved.
