

Commenter's name; Hosea Mun

I am supporting jailbreaking exemption on Smartphones and tablets. I am a user for the phone and tablet. Smartphones need to have the legal authority to jailbreak to gain total control of the phone.

Jailbreaking smartphones gives the user/owner a total control. Jailbreaking allows users to put/download apps with specific authorizations. Most of apps often access to the personal information in the phone to run. This puts users in risk of exposing their person information and invades their privacy. As an example, Carrier IQ issue concerned many users last year. Users could not uninstall the app/function from the phone unless it's jailbroken. User has right to control their phone and take total ownership.