USER and novice developer

Jailbreaking for phones and portable devices must be legal since jailbreaking allows me modifying my portable devices and programming them as a which so i can use them as a more powerful tool, phones are used not only as a phone in these times, I use them to control many devices at my work, I used it to connect to devices that without the jailbreak it wouldn't be possible, it allows me to use the phone that I PAID FOR as it is most convenient for me, every user has its unique way to interact with their device but the companies that put up these devices together cant just simply satisfy all the users. Jailbreaking a device is only a window for many users like me to really be able to fully take advantage of a device. It also promotes research and technological advance since many applications and functions that companies implement in their new software updates come from ideas previously released by developers involved in the jailbreak community. clear example, apple.

making jailbreaking illegal is not allowing you to use the device that you paid for at its full power!
