

This extension is a critical thing for me for the simple reason I've learned so much from all the independent developing and creativity it is capable of. I buy a computer and im allowed to make any changes to it from software to hardware the same with the vehicle you purchase. So it should be the same with my smartphone that i pay for, or any other computing device. If it means my warranty is void in doing so then be it. It's my device that I paid for let me make that decision if I break oh well enjoy more of my money that will be spent on my next device.