

1. Which jailbreaking exemption are you supporting—smartphones/tablets, video game consoles, or both?

I'm Supporting Both Of Them .

2. What's your background (i.e., are you a developer, hobbyist, academic, independent researcher, user, etc.)?

User .

3. What device do you want to ensure you have the legal authority to jailbreak?

Playstation 3 .

4. Please explain why you want to jailbreak this device. What limitations do you face if you aren't able to jailbreak it? Is there software you couldn't run, computing capabilities you wouldn't have, cool things you couldn't do, etc.?

There are a great mods for games but by the official firmware you can't install any of them , there is also great programs , mediaplayers , can't be install without jailbreaking the console , i think it's better to be able to jailbreak the device .

5. If you're a developer, did an online application store or console manufacturer reject your app or game? If so, what reasons did they give?

I'm not .

6. Is there anything else you want to tell the Copyright Office?

The jailbreaking should be legal because there is so many developer make games , programs and can't install it without jailbreaking the device , if the jailbreaking be legal they will be able to share the game or program with other users to try it on their own , i think the jailbreaking is making technology better .
