

To Whom it May Concern:

For these intents and purposes I will be preferred to be referred as Z. I am open source advocate; I firmly believe that the end user should complete control over the software that they choose. Sadly, much of the software on the market has locked down by the manufacturer and users must go through a painful ordeal to gain root access if they choose. Yes, I know that this has been the status quo for quite sometime, but this business model must be changed in order to benefit the end user.
