The software contained in vehicles purchased by owners should be considered 100% their property - not the property of the vehicle manufacturer. Any vehicle owner should be exempt from restrictions on examining and modifying the software in their vehicle. They should be legally allowed to examine and modify that software themselves, or to authorize independent repair facilities to do so. Restricting the access to modify the software to the manufacturer and/or the dealers of that vehicle brand is an unacceptable restriction on the rights of ownership of that vehicle.
