

Hello,

I think that what the MPAA is doing is wrong. I, being a consumer, think that it is okay as to what the hacker community is doing towards this issue. There is nothing wrong with viewing a DVD on another form of media rather than the specified DVD players out there. If someone is going to figure out how, more power to them. What was discovered in no way cheats the MPAA out of any money. I still have to go out and purchase the disc to view the movie, this just increases my options on what I want to play it on. If anything, the MPAA should be happy. This would have opened more doors for them to sell their movies thus getting more money.
