

My comment comes as a photographer who is just starting out; I wonder if the fees you charge could be based on profits made from what you are copyrighting. I could spend all day producing work and copyrighting it but if the work does not make me any money, how do you suppose I can benefit from this? I really think your fees should be based on profits made. Income based copyrighting would be a more sensible way to charge.