

BertoiaStudio.com the art business in Bally, Pa. continues the making and marketing of visual arts since early 1950s. Harry Bertoia's visual arts, both monoprints and sculptures, have increased in value since then.

Val Bertoia, dba: BertoiaStudio.com has sold Bertoia visual artworks since 1978, when he took over the business that Harry Bertoia started. Val typically sells these visual artworks at lower than market prices, with the idea that the re-sales of these artworks will be at higher prices to benefit the first-sales buyers. The title-certificates that go along with the original artwork typically shows a value of twice the sales price at time of sales.

This higher priced re-sale value does not benefit BertoiaStudio.com because of the lack of Resales Royalties.

People of this country know that visual arts are the creative edge for United States of America. Visual Arts make life more interesting, enjoyable, or more meaningful, as can be seen on dollar bills having visual designs instead of blank papers.

With this in mind, BertoiaStudio.com is all in favor of Resale Royalties.