Dear US Copyright Office:

Incremental innovation is imperative to progress. For my business, or even my son's art works, the ability to find and use copyrighted works can be very effective in all forms of communications in images or text.

Please create a system that enables the use of "orphan works" without restriction. Help copyright holders offer licensing and collect royalties. However, don't prevent the use of orphan works because sopyright holders can not be found or because the cost of finding them far exceeds the value.
