It is important that no information is lost or forgotten. Yet unless there is a way for information to legally be used, it cannot be remembered.

For the sake of furthering education of all sorts, it is important to keep all information legally available.

I am currently a undergraduate student and the question of copyright has not yet become a big problem, mostly due to the shallowness of my research. I've already done some undergraduate research with the National Science Foundation, and wasn't able to do research to the best of my abilities due to the unknown legal status of some pictures. I am working to go to graduate school, where I know this will become an issue.

If we can make the system work better, we should.
